

Applications Specialist II

We are currently seeking an Applications Specialist II within our Services business unit to develop novel flow cytometry screening applications, provide assay solutions and interact with customers on screening projects, develop materials and data in support of sales efforts, and to scientifically support current and prospective customers.

Your responsibilities will include:

- Develop, perform, and present novel assays and applications for customer projects; help to prepare reports based on data generated from these studies
- Present data and technical solutions both internally and externally to customers
- Provide scientific support for Service-related sales activities (some travel required)
- Research novel technical solutions and troubleshoot for customer projects
- Training of internal staff
- Perform application testing for new software releases
- Participate and present at scientific meetings

To be successful in this position, you will need to be a creative and detailed scientist who is a highly motivated self-starter. Qualifications include:

- An advanced degree in biological sciences with a minimum of three years of hands-on experience in a screening laboratory
- Laboratory experience in one or more of the following is required: cell based assay development, flow cytometry, cellular and molecular biology, cellular immunology, high-content cellular analysis, cell surface and intracellular fluorescence labeling, high throughput screening
- Strong written and verbal communication skills, with an emphasis on ability to organize and communicate complex concepts in a clear manner
- A portfolio of peer-reviewed publications and scientific presentations

To apply for this position, please send your resume by e-mail to: careers@intellicyt.com

IntelliCyt Corporation

317 Commercial St NE, Suite G100

Albuquerque, NM 87102

IntelliCyt Corporation is an Equal Opportunity Employer